HALL OF FAME

Susan Margaret Reil

The 'last, but not the least' member of the 1968 Hall of Fame is Susan Margaret Reil, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harred. She has one sister, Janis. Susan's major at Andover Central School has been math. She is an active participant in Senior Band, Dance Band, Orchestra, Pep Band, Select Choir and Girls' Ensemble. Susan has also played a major role in both Senior and Junior plays. She is currently the Secretary-Treasurer of the Senior Band. Susan was secretary of her class during her Freshman year and vice-president in her Junior year. Susan will be a freshman at Cazenovia College next autumn. We, the students at Andover Central School, wish the best of luck in the future to Susan.

Hair and Skirts

The newest fashion fads of the jet set has centered upon hair styles and the length of our dresses. First it seems that both boys' and girls' hair has gotten longer. But have you noticed that sometimes you look at a girl's long hair and think how pretty it looks? And then you have turned around, seen another girl with long hair and thought how terrible it looked? What makes the difference?

It almost always is the cleanliness of the hair. The length of the hair rarely makes any difference at all, but the way it is kept saves all the difference. This also applies to the male population, too. I have seen some rather nice looking hair that was quite long on boys, but it was clean. As far as skirts go, or don't go again, some short skirts look really nice, but not every girl has the build for them. Shimmer girls look all right in "minis" but chubbier girls should try to cover up, rather than show off, their obesity.

And, any girl who wears short skirts, no matter how short, the skirt should be long enough so that "white" doesn't show at every step or when seated. Not only is it unbecoming, but it ruins any effect that the girl is trying to produce.

So, when enjoying the new fads, use a little discretion.

Problem Corner

Dear Eenie and Meenie,

With the Easter holiday coming up and everyone else getting a new Easter outfit to wear on Sunday, I would like to have one, too. None of my dresses seem to suit me well enough. My money supply is too low to buy a new dress and I don't know what to do. Can you help me?

"Forgotten by the Easter Bunnies"

Dear "Forgotten",

If you have an older dress that could be altered, this would be a good way to get a new dress. Perhaps the sleeves could be changed or maybe a perky bow would brighten it up. Also, for a reasonable amount of money, you could make your own dress. Most patterns and material can be purchased at very low cost. If you can't see, maybe your mother or a friend could help you. With a new hat or jewelry, your dress should be just fine for Easter Day. Happy Easter! "Bunnies' Helpers"

FHA News

Eighteen FHA members and our advisor, Miss Goodrich, who is also the District B advisor, attended the New York Central Western District FHA Spring Rally which was held in the Scio Central School on March 27. The primary purpose of the rally was to elect officers for the coming year. Andover was represented on the slate of officers by Noreen Thorp and Patty Dibble running for President and Secretary, respectively. Rebecca Roblee of Rushford was elected as President for the coming year.

The theme of the Rally was, "Come Fly With Me". Besides the election of officers, the objective of the rally was to encourage recognition and participation in FHA activities. At Roll Call, each Chapter responded by telling of its project for the last year. Some of these projects were sending packages to Vietnam, donating clothing and gifts to the poor, participating in a Red Cross Home Nursing Course, and a theme of "Friends Near and Far", to learn about other countries and money-making projects.

Dessert was served to those attending the session. Approximately 180 FHA members, advisors and Chapter Mothers attended. The District includes schools in Allegany, Livingston and Wyoming counties.

LIVING UNDER LAW

SPEECH OR THREATS

Freedom of speech enjoys its greatest protection in politics. The Constitution protects your right to sound off, to criticize the government or an official, even to go to extremes based on poor information. Better to let ideas compete freely than to suppress them.

Political statements are often personal, but unless they are knowingly false or malicious, no official can sue for defamation. They are "public property" so to speak, and fair game. But life cannot be threatened.

In a recent case, Mike Madd telephoned the White House to complain about a speech of the President. He then said he had bought a gun and "I wrote a letter to the White House and told the President I would kill him." For that, the Secret Service arrested Mike.

When prosecuted, Mike said he didn't knowingly or wilfully mean to carry out his threat. Still the court convicted him. For conviction it is enough that the threatener comprehends the meaning of the threat and has an apparent determination to carry it out.

Free speech also has some limits. Obscene publications get the least protection even though it may be claimed that obscenity is part of free speech. The law requires a pamphleteer to identify himself or his publisher, but this law cannot be used to harass or limit free speech. The law can control loud and raucous noises, but complete banning of loud speakers and sound trucks violates freedom of speech.

One has a right to hold a rally, parade, or a picket line, but subject to reasonable control. It cannot interfere with the general community's welfare. The law can regulate time, place and manner, but it cannot suppress this form of expression.

Movies, books, magazines, and live plays come within free speech, even though the "message" may be trivial. The law does not permit censorship or regulation before publication unless it is obscene or presents a "clear and present danger" to the community.
