Editorial

by Debbie Baker

December 7, 1941, "a day that will go down in infamy". To some, it must seem like only yesterday that the terrible news was heard throughout the United States. The Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor, thus bringing this country into the greatest war ever fought. Today, twenty-seven years later, our nation is still fighting a war. It's still in Asia, still against a smaller country, and again, a long war. When will it all end?

The end of World War II brought with it many changes. Japan rose from her ravaged and war-torn condition to become a leading nation as far as economics go, and also a close friend of the nation she once hated. Could South Vietnam ever do this or North Vietnam for that matter? I've often wondered what would become of the latter should she lose the war. Would she resort to being a puppet of the Communist powers or would it be possible for her to become one of our allies? Of course, it's possible that she could never be totally defeated with Red China right next door.

Twenty-seven years have passed since Pearl Harbor and again we ask, "When will it end?"

Senior Interview

This week we are saluting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver A. Freeland. Joyce Elaine Freeland made her entrance on September 30, 1950. Her home life is brightened by five brothers and two sisters.

Joyce has been very active during her years at Andover. She has been in Future Nurses, four years, having the honor of holding the office of Vice-President her junior year and Secretary-Treasurer this year. She has also been in FHA, two years; Red Cross, two years and Library Council. In the Junior Play she had the role of Marsha. Her favorite hobbies are babysitting, cooking and sewing.

Joyce is majoring in Cosmetology. After graduating she plans to go to California to study high styling.

We at Andover wish Joyce the best of luck.

Senior News

The Class of '69 wishes to express their sincere thanks to Mr. Barden and Mr. MacCrea for their support in the production of "Annie Get Your Gun". A special thanks goes out to Mrs. Kessler, whose ever-lasting patience and effort made the play a success.
