Greenwood Central School News

The regular Board of Education meeting was held at the Greenwood Central School on May 12.

Several important dates that will be coming up relating to the school were mentioned. A public hearing is planned at the Greenwood Central School for Wednesday night, May 14 with a vote to be taken on the County B.O.C.E.S. proposal on May 20. A resolution was made in full and unanimous support of the proposition to be voted on — that the Steuben BOCES acquire title to the Corning Area and the Hornell Area sites and construct facilities to provide needed occupational programs for our students.

Teacher's Recognition Day activities were mentioned and it was announced that Teacher's Recognition Day is to be proclaimed May 20.

Walter Jackson Board Member, and Robert Hoagland, Principal, will represent the Board at the spring conference of the New York State School Boards Association to be held at the Arkport Central School, Thursday, May 15.

Proposed salaries were set for all non-teaching personnel and Doris Bennett, Clerk, was authorized to issue these proposals in the near future.

Mr. Hoagland reviewed applicants that had indicated interest in teaching at the Greenwood Central School for the coming year with the Board and it was decided to discuss these applicants more fully at the special meeting set for

Barbara Ann Meehan

New York Finalist In National Holstein Contest

Miss Barbara Ann Meehan, Rexville, New York, has been named a finalist in the National Distinguished Junior Member Contest sponsored by Holstein-Friesian Association of America. The Steuben County farm girl was in competition with entries from 31 states. She is the 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Meehan. Barbara, her two sisters, four brothers and parents have together developed an outstanding herd of Registered Holsteins along with a sound over-all farm operation.

Entries in the contest are judged on record keeping ability and

May 20. Resignations from Terry Beckwith, Ronald Shinebarger and Mark Underwood were read and accepted by the Board. All bills were authorized paid according to the warrant presented for May and several transferred from one account to another were authorized.

include an evaluation of the breeding program and management practices followed. Young people given national recognition have provided leadership in their school and community, demonstrated a variety of interests and through their actions are preparing themselves to become respected and useful citizens. There are separate contest divisions for young men and women.

Barbara is a graduate of Greenwood Central School and is currently studying to become a Licensed Practical Nurse. She writes that "The reason for good dairymen making the switch to Registered Holsteins is that they are worth more, dollar-wise". In answer to another question, she states, "The major factor in individual cow production is a good breeding program." From the hayfield to the barn and on to the show ring, this energetic young lady has been actively involved with the dairy operation at Frangin Farm.

As a finalist in the contest, Barbara will receive a special plaque in behalf of the members of Holstein-Friesian Association of America. She shares honors with Barbara Gerlach of Iowa; Mary Louise Miller of Ohio and Maureen Ann Mahoney of Washington. The winning 1969 National Distinguished Junior Member is Miss Elaine M. Furu of Michigan. There are currently more than 13,800 active junior members of Holstein-Friesian Association of America.
