Allegany County Farm Bureau Members met in the Belmont Parish Hall Thursday evening at 7:30 p. m., for a Farmer-Businessmen dinner followed by a program which included John Follman, state organization director, as the main speaker.

Mr. Follman introduced his talk by audience participation using wooden blocks to portray varying monetary assets of the largest industries in the country. This demonstration led to the statement that "agriculture, leads all industries in the number of employees, amount spent for equipment, and in assets — while second in annual income — and fourth in sales."

These plain statistics explode the myth that farmers are responsible for the high cost of food products because of high profits. Instead, farmers actually receive low remuneration on a per-hour basis for the work that they put in to harvest their farm products.

The speaker cited that agriculture, employed 4,206,000 workers as compared to the next highest industry, textiles and apparel, which employed 2,393,000. The oil and coal industry which controls probably one of the biggest lobbies in Washington, employs the least number of people that were in the comparison group.

Mr. Follman discussed the farm "image" and explained that words had several different meanings so that when discussing farm problems, the farmers may mean one thing — while the public understands it in another sense of the actual meaning. He urged that more publicity be given to problems facing the farmers and that the public be kept fully informed.

Donald McLeman, public relations chairman, then told the group that the Farm Bureau would again be sponsoring a booth at the Allegany County Fair in Angelica and asked for suggestions from the members for making the display as attractive as possible, as well as volunteers to operate it.

Mr. Carrol Burdick, Railroad Valley, one of the Directors of the Organization attended from Andover with the Editor of the Andover News as his guest.

News That's Print To Fit

Well Folks, another year has rolled around — and here we are with Memorial Day facing us tomorrow. And, judging from the weather to-day — it will either be doggone HOT — or else we will be having thundershowers, just to keep things really interesting — as well as furnishing possible problems for the services.

First its too cold! Then its too hot! After the ACS students fixed up the planters along Main St.

as well as getting the island all cleaned up and planted with geraniums and petunias — along came a cold night — and colder morning, freezing all of the plants in the "Island".

The word was passed along to all of us that have the planters out in front of our business places to cover up the plants for the expected frost. However, somehow or other, it is rather apparent that the "word didn't get passed along" as to who was supposed to play "nursemaid" to the plants in the "Island" — so it looks as if that will have to be done over again! C'est dommage!

Another lesson learned — to profit by another year. Suppose?

Then, we had something else called to our attention, that certainly seems as if something could or should be done another year.

Last Thursday night, May 22nd the Senior Spring Concert was presented at the Andover Central School. And would you believe it? According to our source of information, there were only about 100 people in the audience which included teachers and students.

In rounded out figures, there were around 50 students in the band with another 40 in the choir, (this does not include members that also play in the band). These students, as well as the Music Department, spent many hours in practices and rehearsals — and then presented a wonderful concert! And to what? To a very small audience in contrast to what the Auditorium is capable of handling.

If just the parents of all of the students that participated in the concert had attended — the audience would have been doubled.

Thus the $64,000 question is, "where was everyone"? Why can't a worth while program like this be supported by the parents and public.

Any answers?
