Red Cross News

by Peggy Tuttle

Mrs. Rosemary Burger, chairman of the Andover Junior Red Cross, received a letter of recommendation from Charles D. Estill. Mr. Estill is the Assistant Regional Manager for the American Red Cross. Mrs. Burger was commended for her idea of sending cookies and newsletters to local servicemen, who are serving in Vietnam or other places overseas at Christmas time. The letter stated and I quote: "We think this is something other schools could use as a real community service and morale booster for servicemen."

The Andover Central School Junior Red Cross newsletter was first sent to Mrs. Philip H. Duke in Wellsville, who is the Executive Director of the Allegany County Chapter of the American Red Cross. She then sent the letter to Mr. Charles D. Estill and it has now been sent to the National Director of the Red Cross Youth, Mr. John M. Manikel. Everyone is now awaiting word to see if the National Director will pick up and promote this fine idea. Congratulations to Mrs. Burger and we all hope her idea is promoted throughout the nation.

In our local Red Cross Drive prizes were awarded for grades K - 12 for the classes who contributed the most money to the drive. The winners are:

- First Prize - Mrs. Burger's seventh grade
Second Prize - Mrs. Boyce's fifth grade
Third Prize - Mrs. Schwarzenbach's sixth grade.

Congratulations to the students in the grades and thank you to all who contributed.

FHA Banquet

The Annual Mother and Daughter Banquet was held in the school cafeteria on Wednesday, May 21. Following the dinner and the guest speaker, Miss Judy Boyd, was the presentation of pins and the installation of new year's officers.

Miss Boyd spoke about the S.S. Hope. The S.S. Hope is a ship which goes to a poor country for a period of several months. After it gets in port, the qualified doctors, nurses and technicians teach some of the willing people there to also become nurses and technicians to better their country. The crew can usually teach about twenty-five persons.

While being in port, they also instruct as many people as possible for all types of diseases. Miss Boyd showed us many slides of the S.S. Hope and its many activities.

LIVING UNDER LAW

IF INSURANCE DOESN'T COVER

Suppose a windstorm uproots your shade trees, or a flood ruins your basement, or a fire burns your house down. If insurance doesn't cover the loss, you may still get a helping hand from the federal government. The government will not reimburse you in cash, the way insurance does but it may soften your fiscal pain by letting you deduct the loss over a $100 minimum on your next income tax return.

What kind of losses may you deduct? Any that are caused by "fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty". Fire, storm, and shipwreck are plain enough. But what does "other casualty" include? There are several tests.

For one thing, to qualify as a tax deduction, the loss must be relatively sudden. Thus, damage to a valuable elm tree, inflicted gradually by disease, was held not a casualty—hence not a deductible loss. Also, the loss must be due to some external force. When a duck hunter's ring slipped off his finger and vanished in muddy waters, the loss was held not deductible because it could not be blamed on any external force.

Furthermore, there must be a cause-and-effect relationship between the original mishap and the ultimate damage. For example: A horse died after eating the silk lining of a hat, and his owner claimed a deduction for the loss. But the claim was not allowed, because there was good reason to think that the horse died not from his extraordinary diet but from ordinary influenza.

Of course, this tax deduction applies clearly in the case of a natural disaster. But man-made devastation is by no means ruled out. For instance, one home owner was permitted to deduct the damage to his house from sonic booms, caused by a nearby aviation show. This was held to be closely akin to the damage done by a windstorm.

In another case, a new house was invaded by vandals, who did damage to the stove, washing machine, dryer, and freezer. The owner claiming the loss as a tax deduction, pointed out that it was (1) sudden; (2) caused by an external force; and (3) destructive.

This made sense to the court and the deduction was upheld.

Editorial

by Debbie Baker

This Friday, the entire United States of America pays tribute to the men throughout our history who have given their lives for their country. Respects are paid to men from the American Revolution up to the present and Vietnam. There really isn't very much we, the living, can say about our dead soldiers. They have given that most precious gift—life—to keep our country alive amidst the threats of other factions taking over. Most of them are the anonymous heroes in the fight for liberty and justice. The heroes of the Civil War, of World War II, and all other wars are officially recognized and rightfully so. But all men, the courageous and the not so courageous, have fought and died, maybe for something they didn't even believe in. They've given their lives in sacrifice to keep the ideals and beliefs of freedom alive.
