Vest Cumorah Mission Changes Leadership

Reid E. Bankhead, of 658 Winton Road South, Rochester, New York president of the Cumorah Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will complete his service as mission president July 1, 1969. For the past three years, Bankhead has presided over in missionary and Church activities in the Andover area and he will now return with his wife and five children to his home in Provo Utah where he will assume his previous occupation as a Professor of Religion at Brigham Young University.

In his travels as Mission President, Bankhead has been in the Alfred area on numerous occasions to speak at Open Houses, and other Church activities. During the past three years, he has constantly sacrificed his time to help other people in the New York area more fully understand the message of the Book of Mormon, and its importance to the world today.

As there is no paid ministry in the Church, Bankhead as well as those full time missionaries serving under him, have "donated" their time and efforts to the Church with no monetary benefits or gains.

During this period of time, the Church has experienced a remarkable growth, as two new stakes were recently organized, the Hudson River Stake, previously known as the Albany District, and the Susquehanna Stake, previously known as the Susquehanna District. With these two new Stakes, there is now a total of five in the State of New York.

Through his knowledge of the scriptures, his fluent speaking and the sincere love he expresses to all, President Bankhead has gained the respect of those people he has come in contact with. As an act of appreciation, the missionaries of the Cumorah Mission recently presented to him, an original 1830 copy of the Book of Mormon. The copy was valued at over $600, and is a record of ancient American people and prophets, and accepted by The Latter-day Saints as scripture along with the Holy Bible.

Filling the vacancy left by President Bankhead will be Robert L. Stephenson of the Valley View Stake, Salt Lake City, Utah. Stephenson has been serving as Bishop since May, 1966 and is affiliated with Superior Sales and Service of Salt Lake City. Born in Nephi Utah, he and his wife Ethel are both graduates of Utah State University and are the parents of seven children.

Weekly Editors Rate Future Political Changes

Arthur J. Goldberg, former Supreme Court Justice looks like the strongest Democratic candidate in next year's gubernatorial and senatorial race, according to a poll of several hundred weekly and suburban editors announced this week by the New York Press Association which has its headquarters at Syracuse University.

The Association's continuing Editor Opinion Poll of weekly editors asked two questions, namely, who the two strongest Democratic candidates would be in the 1970 race against Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller and U.S. Senator Charles Goodell.

Editors were asked to rank seven of the submitted names in each of the questions.

Approximately 50% of the weekly and suburban editors felt that Mr. Goldberg would be the strongest vote-getting nominee in the event that Governor Rockefeller was the Republican nominee for Governor in the 1970 race.

Sixty percent of the weekly editors said that Mr. Goldberg would be the strongest vote-getting senatorial Democratic nominee from the list of seven names submitted in the event Senator Goodell were the Republican nominee for U.S. Senator in 1970.

The seven names submitted to the weekly and suburban editors were names being mentioned recently as Democratic nominees for either of the posts, although they are not necessarily acknowledged candidates.

The six in addition to Mr. Goldberg in the submitted list were Theodore Kheel, New York City labor negotiator; Representative Otis Pike; Howard Samuels, who sought the Democratic nomination in 1966 and ended up on the ticket as a lieutenant governor candidate; Stephen E. Smith, former Senator Robert Kennedy's aide; Theodore C. Sorenson, former aide of the late President Kennedy, and Congressman Samuel S. Stratton.

Ranked as the second strongest vote-getting nominee from the list was Congressman Stratton who polled 25% of the editors votes in a gubernatorial race and 20% in the senatorial contest. Stratton was particularly strong among up-state editors as the best vote-getting nominee against Mr. Rockefeller getting 33% of the editors vote to Mr. Goldberg's 39%.

Mr. Samuels ranked third in both of the categories receiving 13% of the editors' vote in the gubernatorial race and 10% in the senatorial race.

Mr. Goldberg on the other hand was particularly strong among suburban editors in down-state and Long Island. Of this group he polled 83% in the senatorial race and 80% in the gubernatorial poll.

In the "strongest candidate" vote-getting poll for governor, the order of finish was: Goldberg, Stratton, Samuels, Sorenson, Piffe, Smith and Kheel.

The order of finish in the senatorial poll, among weekly editors, ended up with Goldberg, Stratton, Samuels, Pike, Smith, Sorenson, and Kheel.

"Code of Ethics" Report Must Be Filed by Officials

State Comptroller Arthur Levitt has alerted local officials throughout the State to the provisions of a new amendment to the State's Conflicts of Interest Law.

Comptroller Levitt is a member of the Governor's Special Commission on Ethical Standards in Public Service, which recommended the new legislation.

Under the new provisions, local governments are required to file with the Comptroller certain information concerning codes of ethics.

In a letter addressed to 61 city clerks, 57 clerks of county boards, 555 village clerks and 931 town clerks Comptroller Levitt said that the new provisions require filing with his office the following:

- a. A copy of any code of ethics within 30 days after September 1, 1969, or the date of adoption.
b. A statement as to the existence and membership of any local board of ethics within 30 days after September 1, or the date of establishment.

"The information which you file will be evaluated," the Comptroller told local officials, "and used by the Commission in making appropriate recommendations for changes in State laws relating to the ethical conduct of public officers and employees as may be necessary or desirable."

Comptroller Levitt had a leading role in drafting the State's conflict of interest legislation covering municipal contracts, which was adopted in 1964. He also served on a commission that drafted a code of ethics for legislators.

New Laws May Result In Millions of Dollars for New York State

Millions of dollars in unclaimed property, abandoned by its owners, may be turned over to New York State's treasury as the result of two new laws enacted by the 1969 Legislature on the joint recommendation of Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz and Comptroller Arthur Levitt. The Attorney General said that under one of the laws, ownerless or unclaimed property held by U. S. Government agencies, would be payable to the State for the use of the people of the State.

Maple Syrup Industry In New York Enjoying Best Year Since 1965

New York State maple syrup producers are smiling this year — and for good reason.

"This has been a vintage year for maple syrup," said Prof. Fred E. Winch Jr., of the N. Y. State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. "Some producers in the state have produced 20 per cent more than normal."

The forestry expert said this follows two relatively bad years. "The last really good year for maple producers was in 1965," he said.

He noted that this year's syrup is of a light, high quality despite a slow starting season that failed to get into high gear until the last part of March and then continued into the first part of April.

Winch said there has been a 16 to 18 per cent increase in the number of producers who buy and process sap from neighboring farms. He stated that some smaller producers have dropped out of the maple syrup scene but this was more than compensated for by the number of larger producers.

He attributed a six per cent loss of smaller producers to the shortage of labor and the expense of modern tubing and tap devices.

Most major producers in the state averaged about 1,000 gallons of syrup this year he said, which is bringing from $6 to $8 a gallon.

Attorney General Issues Charter Flight Warning

Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz has warned New Yorkers to beware of fly-by-night tour promoters who accept deposit from prospective vacationers for non-existent flights and cruises and then disappear, leaving them stranded. With the summer vacation season hardly underway, complaints to the Bureau of Consumer Frauds and Protection have already begun to mount from disappointed consumers who have been victimized by phony charter flight and cruise promotions.

It is important that forest fires be detected early. A small fire is easily put out, but a large one is hard to control. If you spot the beginning of a forest fire, quench it if you can. Otherwise, report it immediately to the nearest fire suppression agency.
