Slow Down, World!

The people of the world are all different. Each and every one of us is different in some way from everybody else.

Being a senior and on the threshold of a great change in my life, I have suddenly and truly become aware of this.

I have realized that nothing is ever the same as it was yesterday. Everything changes. The pace of life itself seems to increase everyday.

I'd like to be younger again because when I was in grade school, it seemed that there was always enough time for everything.

For many people, this fact is merely something they have to live with, but for me it's really startling.

Thanksgiving

There is a special holiday that is celebrated, primarily in the United States and Canada, every year. It is one on which thanks are given for the abundant harvest and other blessings of the past year.

Everyone knows that the first Thanksgiving was celebrated in the autumn of 1621.

Since that first Thanksgiving Day, our world has become much more complex. We have entered into one war after another until thousands of our people have been killed.

Thanksgiving time should be a time of peace and goodwill. It should symbolize a man sharing what he has with another man, without discrimination of race, creed, or color.

This Thanksgiving we are still fighting a war in Viet Nam. We are still trying to overcome the hunger all over the world.

I only hope that at this time NEXT year, we can give our thanks to the Lord for a peaceful and healthy world in which all mankind can live and have hope.

S. Noland Harriman Chairman, The American National Red Cross

Also, the Andover Chapter received a letter from Mrs. Philip H. Duke, Executive Director of the American Red Cross, Wellsville, New York, thanking them for making cookies for the men in Viet Nam.

As you can see the Andover Chapter of the American Red Cross, under the direction of Mrs. Burger, is doing a very commendable job.

Roving Reporter

Many people today have the idea that youth have no ideals or goals in life except those of protesting something or being violent. However, this is not true for everyone!

Debbie Nichols - "I want to be waterboy for the New York Mets"
Andy Gram - "I'd like to be the first man to land on Alpha Centuri."

Susan Stephens - "Since I'm planning on taking horticultural courses, I'd like to be a flower girl."

Gregg Shellman - "I'd like to play basketball for the 'New York Knicks'."

Dawn Baker - "I'd like to be the first lady astronaut!"

Sandy Merrick - "I'd like to practice what I preach and what others preach but don't practice!"

Ronnie Godown - "My main goal is to run over Carl Graves!"

These are the goals of a few of the Junior Class. In a few years we shall see to what degree they carry out these goals!
