CONSERVATION COMMENTS

ALBANY - Legislation to abolish the deer party permit system in the Northern Zone has been prefiled by Canada Lake Republican Assemblyman Glenn H. Harris, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Environmental Management and Natural Resources. The party permit ban is multisponsored by Assemblyman Andrew Ryan (R-Plattsburgh).

Under present law, the Environmental Conservation Department is authorized to issue special deer hunting party permits authorizing the taking of one deer of either sex by each hunting party, in addition to the one deer which may be taken by each licensed hunter. Many conservationists and sportsmen's groups feel the party permit system has led to the decimation of the deer herd in the Northern Zone, which includes all of Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Hamilton, Lewis, St. Lawrence, and Warren Counties as well as part of Fulton, Herkimer, Oneida, Oswego, Saratoga and Washington Counties.

Recently there has been much controversy over the amount of deer in the Northern Zone and the number of deer party permits issued in that area. Assemblyman Harris said in pre-filing his bill, "By not allowing party permits in the Northern Zone, we would effect a necessary cutback in the taking of unlimited number of deer."

"It was the legislative intent of the party permit system that the Conservation Department would exercise discretion and sensible allocation of these permits and would discontinue the use of the permits in areas when the deer appear to be diminishing," said the Canada Lake Assemblyman.

"While the Department has exercised this privilege in some party permit areas, it has been reluctant to eliminate the party permit in most of the Northern Zone areas."

"The result has been an increase in the number of permits issued in the Northern Zone from 13,607 in 1965 to a high of 28,078 in 1969", Assemblyman Harris said. "Even some members of the Conservation Department - who prefer to remain anonymous - feel that the Department may have gone overboard with party permit quotas in the Northern Zone."

"The continuing issuance of party permits for the taking of unantlered deer coupled with flagrant violation of the use of the tags on the deer killed leave us at a point where white tail deer in this area are bordering on extinction," said the Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee. "The elimination of the party permit system in the Northern Zone does not adversely affect the deer management programs because section 226 of the Conservation Law gives the Department authority to permit wilderness hunts and post-season hunts for deer where it is deemed necessary"

UNDERCOVER RUMORS AND REPORTS

by Vant Neff

Behind-the-scenes hijack story you probably won't see in the regular news coverage: it is reported that Jewish hostages among the kidnapped plane passengers were subjected to one humiliation after another. True, they were not physically assaulted, but they were the victims of untold emotional stress.

When new troops of Palestinian Liberation Front guerrillas took over guard watch, the Jews were marched outside the planes and forced to stand in the Arab desert, while the guards spat at them and near them. The mood of the captors was ugly, reminding the Jews of their centuries-long heritage of oppression at the hands of various people. For the most part, the hijack victims were not Israelis but American vacationers including women and small children. The injustice of hijacking in general has aroused the ire of the civilized world, but the alleged behavior of the Palestinian troops in this particular instance was unconscionable.

Frivolous financial note from Pakistan: the beggars are organizing a labor union, and plan branches all through the country. (Beggaring is a business there.) Next time you're traveling to Pakistan and are approached by a panhandler, please remember that part of every penny you put in his palm may go into a union treasury, and never be used by the "poor" beggar at all!

One strike after another! And no one really wins! I fear that the General Motors walkout is no exception. Examine the facts: 350,000 workers idle and without their normal income. Thousands more in related industries—fire, seat belt and auto accessories makers—felt the pinch of non-production. (I can't imagine that the unionists—men with families to feed and bills to pay—could possibly enjoy the situation.) Half of the nation's automobile output halted. Delayed car delivery—and if you're on the list for one, you may wait and wait, and they pay more for it. That's the cost of a strike.

The United Auto Workers Union, the UAW, made a bid for an overall $9 to $12 billion wage increase over the three year contract. No one objects to an earned raise, but higher pay for the same work only means higher prices for all of us, on almost everything. The high dollar demands made by UAW leader Leonard Woodcock and his union associates at the GM bargaining table—40 to 50% pay jumps—can't be matched by the rest of the population. As the inflationary trend accelerates, the raises won't mean a thing, and the workers won't really be much ahead of the game. And the rest of us will be in the hole.

Talking about inflation, the Red-dominated Czech authorities are so fearful of their citizens traveling to the West and not returning that they have raised the fares a prohibitive 275%. Their apprehension about defection is quite understandable, in view of the great numbers of disillusioned Czechoslovakians, including a number of diplomats, who have quietly "disappeared" into the free world. Bluntly speaking, I hope that the liberty-loving Czechs won't be dissuaded by the rising cost of freedom.

Remember pledging allegiance to the flag in school? It's a different scene now. Times have changed. A young man old enough to know better—nineteen—wore the American flag as a poncho. His elastic concept of civil liberties landed him behind bars. The judge sentenced him to four months and fined him $250. This boy isn't alone in his counter-cultural reaction against our American traditions.

A national magazine displayed a full color picture of a model in bed, draped in flag-patterned sheets, with pillow cases to match. The American flag is parodied in bikini bathing suits, trouser patches, shirts, T-shirts, Obacene films. And what have you. Must we accept this abuse? Wouldn't we be well advised to return to the values and standards on which our country was founded—a love of liberty and a healthy respect for law, order and tradition?

If you had invested, directly or indirectly, in Uganda, the Sudan or Somalia, to help these bedraggled African nations get a foothold in the modern industrial world, you might be in for a costly disappointment today. Recently, the governments of these developing countries confiscated a great percentage of foreign companies doing business there. Many of these firms are American. Now the problem is compensation. Who pays the rightful owners for their investments and financial losses? (Or does anyone?) Nationalized industry may be nice for the newborn nations today, but what will they do tomorrow when they need further investment and advice? Once bitten, twice shy. Americans, look out!

Texans pride themselves on growing things bigger and better than the rest of us. Texas Congressman, Senator John Tower, has introduced a bill which promises to balance our country's one-sided labor legislation. Senator Tower obviously isn't impressed with the activities of the National Labor Relations Board, and to my mind, he is quite correct. The NLRB, a politically-appointed, five-man group is supposed to rule impartially on employer-worker disputes, but the consistently pro-labor-leader pattern of its decisions has caused many a snicker in Washington. Now, Senator Tower has suggested replacing the NLRB with Federal Court in order to give all participants in labor controversies a fair shake. My vote for labor law reform—and quick termination of the prejudiced NLRB—goes to the Towering Texan. The acceptance of his proposal may put the union chieftains' noses out of joint, but they've been on a winning streak for too long. Isn't it time for the "little man"—you and I and the union rank-and-file member—to have a turn?

Another dose of one-sided justice meted out by the National Labor Relations Board: a handful of women unionists—mothers who had to work to make ends meet—returned to their jobs during a strike. The union levied heavy disciplinary fines against them amounting to $500 each. Incidentally, they earned something like $1.75 an hour. Their sympathetic employer protested against the excessive fines and attempted to represent the women against the union. The NLRB said, "No!" Decisions such as this—pro-big union, anti-little individual—are typical of the NLRB. But it doesn't serve the best interests of society, the workers, or our economy, in my opinion.
