Andover Resident Develops CEI

A research instrument developed by an Andover resident, Dr. William J. Walker of Alfred University is being used this month to test 1,200 school children in five secondary schools in New Zealand.

The instrument, The Classroom Environment Index (CEI) was developed by Dr. Walker in cooperation with Dr. George G. Stern of Syracuse University. The project was financed by the Cooperative Research Program of the U. S. Office of Education.

The CEI is designed to measure the psychological environment in a classroom in an effort eventually to learn what type of environment fosters creativity. While small children are almost universally creative, it is a rare quality in adults. The CEI is an attempt to learn what happens to this tremendous resource.

Dr. Alan C. Webster of Massey University in Palmerston North, New Zealand is using the CEI as part of a study to predict outcomes of secondary education. The instrument, in its present experimental form, has been used in schools and colleges in New York State Massachusetts, Nebraska and New Jersey.

A PEER BEHIND THE NEWSFRONT by Vani Neff

Have you ever stayed at the Waldorf-Astoria, one of the world's richest hotels? And without paying the bill? Don't laugh. It's easy, if you're on welfare. It's been done, and only recently. Non-working welfare recipients were lodged at the elegant Waldorf-Astoria at the expense of the taxpayers of the city of New York. When Mayor Lindsay suspended the caseworker who caused the fiasco, the welfare workers' union threatened to strike. "We'll tell you what to do, Mr. Mayor!" said the union leaders.

Since there are no residence requirements for receiving a welfare handout in New York, anybody can go there and apply for public assistance. Why don't you and I try it, and see what happens? Perhaps we, too, will enjoy the luxury of the posh Waldorf-Astoria (or should it be renamed the Welfare-Astoria?).

Watch out, Americans! It has been reported that Mayor Lindsay, a cultivated politician but an inept administrator, has his eye on the U. S. Presidency. To paraphrase a proverb, "With a friend like him running the country, we wouldn't need any enemies!"

Interesting sidelight on the Angela Davis trial: It has been estimated that the proceedings will cost the taxpayers one-and-a-half million dollars in extra taxes. I wonder if the "radical rich" groups in our country with sympathies with the lower and middle income citizens, and send some of their much-publicized "contributions". (Or do they reserve their pity, piety, and political philanthropy only for radical and way-left causes?)

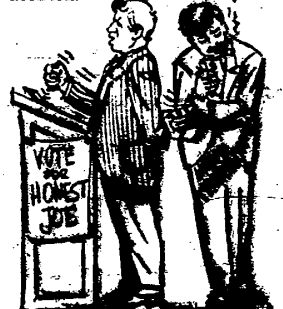

In a recent case, however, the NLRB pulled a complete about-face and to the surprise of many one involved, made a wise and reasoned decision in favor of an ordinary, everyday little case. In the way our labor laws are usually administered that incident made headlines!

In case you missed them, here's what happened: A contractor subcontracted work in specialized areas to three companies, all of which employed members of the Operating Engineers Union. One of the three companies, however, did not have a contract with that union and decided to assign members of an entirely unrelated union to the job of pushing the buttons to operate a high-powered welding machine. (Isn't that something like telling a baker to iron a shirt, a chore he'd know nothing about?) The Operating Engineers Union insisted that only their men could perform that task, and threatened to strike unless their terms were met.

A squabble of major proportions developed, and the matter was brought before the NLRB. Its decision: The union had erred. The union had violated the law. A powerful union, for once, was proved in the wrong!

Naturally, the union wouldn't stand for it, and went to higher courts. The ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States substantiated the NLRB's original decision.

It's a safe day in June, or January or April, when the Big Labor-Beast National Labor Relations Board gives anyone else a break. Isn't that a sad commentary on the status of our labor laws? Wouldn't we be smarter to put American labor laws under the jurisdiction of impartial federal courts, where the average man, or little business, would be more apt to get a fair and square deal, instead of having it happen so seldom that it makes headlines?

Remember this news item: Castro wants the British to go in and take over Cuba. He says he'll give them certain special privileges because he thinks they are doing and mobbing for a takeover of Communist Cuba. Yet on the other side of the coin, this blustering, brinded bully of the Caribbean who denies his own countrymen political freedom is exporting his own brand of Communism all over Central and South America, demanding the governments and creating wholesale chaos.

My personal candidate for the least wonderful woman of the year: Bernadine Dohm, fugitive Weatherwoman super-leader. Allegedly directing bombings and other acts of violence from her underground hiding place, Miss Dohm has recently been allotted about $2500 worth of precious "guest" editorial space—absolutely free—in the New York Times, a newspaper whose power and influence go without saying. In her editorial comment, which was nothing more than an exhortation to violence directed toward potential dissidents, she gave vent to her hate against "The Establishment". If you or I or the guy across the way wanted to express our opinions, I wonder whether the excited Times would grant us the same space—without cost? In my opinion, Miss Dohm's warped mind can do neither the country nor the impressionable students who blindly follow her any good whatever.

Question: How come the nation's #1 newspaper, the New York Times, devotes such a disproportionate amount of space to outright radical articles and only rarely records the same heyway to the "middle American" viewpoint?

I never thought I'd see the day, but Congress is at last considering an election reform bill which would limit spending in political campaigns. The measure is welcomed by many, and supported wholeheartedly by a new political group called Common Cause.

Investigators anticipated discovering that major political donations come from Astute business interests. But when they shook the money tree, out tumbled big union bucks! The unions, directly and indirectly, have been giving vast sums of money and manpower, unofficially, of course, to the election efforts of their chosen candidates. It isn't at all unusual to hear of a $100,000 "gift" to the vote-getting fund of a political aspirant. Or a Congressional hopeful admitting that his campaign was financed by $100,000 from a union.

For 100 years, political campaigns have been financed by the own men backed them to the hilt, and the voters have been misled. It may be finally corrected when the proposed campaign law compels unions to reveal their political contributions. Changes are long overdue. Let your man in Congress know how you feel about the new election reform bill. It's up to you!
