Granddaughter Wins School Honors

Janet VanVoorhen, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Yorton of Chestnut Street, Andover, recently received notice of the following letter advising her parents of the following honor:

Woonsocket Senior High School Woonsocket, Rhode Island 02895 December 30, 1974

Mr. and Mrs. Roger VanVoorhen 43 Claude Lane Woonsocket, Rhode Island 02895

Dear Mr. and Mrs. VanVoorhen: Each year the principals of public and private secondary schools across the nation are invited to help honor their most outstanding students by nominating them to the Society of Outstanding American High School Students. A student named by his principal is eligible for further state, regional and national awards and scholarships.

I am very happy to inform you that I have named your daughter, Janet, as one of the twelve Outstanding Students from Woonsocket Senior High School. I know that honors of this type should justly be shared by the parents who provided the encouragement and the discipline necessary for scholastic achievement and character building. This award represents more than just academic success. Students are also evaluated for their school citizenship, their high ideals and their moral integrity.

Students nominated by their high school principals will be contacted directly by the Outstanding American High School Students Program for biographical and activity information.

Again Congratulations!

Very sincerely yours,
Albert H. Choquette, Jr.
Principal

Make Your Own Terrarium

If you like to keep your green thumb in practice year round, a terrarium can be your own miniature greenhouse. It's a fun way for children to learn about plants, and terrariums are easy to make and to maintain.

Easy-to-follow instructions are given in a new Johnny Horizon sheet fact called Make Your Own Terrarium. A free copy may be had from Consumer Information, Pueblo Colorado 81009.

The tips on how to make your own terrarium include advice on: Container — Use clear glass containers, (not green or brown, they obscure the light) that can be sealed to insure proper moisture for the growing plants. Gravel and Charcoal — Cover the bottom of the container with at least one inch of moist gravel in which you've mixed pieces of activated charcoal.

Soil — For a woody plant, use rich soil taken from where the plants are found. A household plant needs a soil mixture of equal parts of garden soil and sand. If you're planting cactus, you'll need a mostly sandy soil and more sunlight.

Plants — You can use moss and lichens for ground cover or even gravel of different colors. Then add clover, ferns, native plants, wild flowers and ivy.

Water — One you've put the plants in the soil, sprinkle or spray them with tepid water and cover the terrarium with a piece of glass. Remember to keep a moist, but not a soggy atmosphere for your plants. A fine beading of dense fog means too much and you should remove the cover so some water can evaporate. No moisture in sight means not enough water.

Temperature — The woody terrarium will need to have a cool room temperature. A house plant one will tolerate house temperature between 60 and 70 degrees. Make Your Own Terrarium (free) is one of the 260 selected Federal publications listed in the current edition of the Consumer Information Index. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the Index is available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009, and from Federal Information Centers located throughout the country.
