A Maple "Craftsman" At Work! One of the leading Area Maple Producers displays the "art" of making maple candy by hand at the Maple Festival in front of a group of interested watchers. The maple syrup is heated in a copper boiler or pan, then is allowed to run slowly into a hand-crafted machine with paddles where it is aerated, and then poured hot into special rubber molds at the right consistency so it will harden into perfect "maple leaves".

Emery Spearheads Drive For Tourist Promotion Funds

Assemblyman James L. Emery (R-Genesee) said that he will continue to push for the addition of $200,000 in state assistance for tourist travel and promotion, despite the defeat of his amendment during the budget session of the Assembly on March 25.

Emery, who spearheaded much of the Republican Minority debate on the budget and several amendments offered to it by the Minority, said that he will request the $200,000 for tourist promotion in the Supplemental Budget to be acted upon later in the legislative session. The Governor slashed $111,400 from the recently-passed state budget under the Travel Promotion Act of 1974 Emery explained.

"This decrease is not only unjustified," the Assistant Minority Leader said, "and is a severe blow to our major tourist areas in the State. In our area I am particularly concerned with the Finger Lakes region."

Emery continued: "That was the reason for my amendment to the Budget last Tuesday night. It was defeated by a straight 'party line' vote with Republicans in support and the Majority Democrats in opposition. It seems strange to me that Upstate Democrats in areas heavily dependent upon tourism could vote against this extra funding when today's economic climate makes it imperative that we promote our resort areas. How can they justify this when, at the same time, many of them voted for some $300 million in new taxes which surely would have driven business and industry from this state in droves, had the taxes ever been passed by both houses.

"Tourist associations, such as the Finger Lakes Association have strongly supported this move for these funds. Between now and the introduction of the Supplemental Budget, I will be attempting to show the importance of tourist promotion in this state when it is expected that more and more residents will forego longer trips because of gas prices and the economic situation in general and seek vacations in various parts of their own state," Emery concluded.

Culinary Art Show To Be Held At Ag-Tech Wellsville

Area students will take part in the fourth annual Culinary Arts Show and Dinner Saturday, April 19, at the Wellsville Vocational Division of State University Agricultural and Technical College at Alfred.

Sponsored by the Chapeau de Cuisinier (hat of the chef) Club, the show by students in the Food Service Department will be staged in the activities building on the Wellsville campus.

The show is open to the general public and information regarding tickets is available by contacting the food service department by phone or in person.

Arranged entirely by students enrolled in the food service program, the annual show provides an opportunity for them to display their culinary knowledge and skills in direct competition with each other.

Highlights of the evening will be the awarding of ribbons to prize winners and presentation of Chapeau de Cuisinier keys to new members.

Membership in the club is limited to students who have competed in a national, state or local accredited culinary arts show and have won a first or grand prize in the event.

Club officers note that the local club was organized in 1972 and sponsors several activities to foster interest in the culinary arts and to provide scholarship aid to students.

The time table for this year's show is judging at 2 p. m., viewing at 5:30 p. m., dinner at 7 p. m., and dancing at 9 p. m.

A panel of distinguished chefs selected to do the judging under international rules and regulations is headed this year by Raul J. Sartini, food and beverage manager of the Parkway Ramada Inn Niagara Falls.

Firewood Customers Bargain Hunting?

Firewood customers looking for a bargain might do well to purchase next fall and winter's supply this spring, according to the State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

The strongest and most efficient heating by wood used as fuel occurs when the wood is dry. Wood purchased now has months to dry out, or "season," before its eventual use in the fireplace or stove.

Some dealers are offering lower prices for "green" wood, which might be an added incentive for the prospective firewood buyer. A question of storage might deter some customers, but any garage, attic, crawl space, cellar or extra room could serve the purpose. The drier the area, the better the wood will season. Garages and attics offer the best drying conditions. Even a plastic sheet cover, arranged for air circulation, can be used.

The Department's Bureau of Weights and Measures reminds spring firewood buyers that fuel wood is to be sold, by law, according to its price per cord or fraction of a cord, or other measure agreed upon by buyer and seller. The term "face cord" has no legal definition in New York State. Face cords are arbitrarily defined by the seller, and the wise consumer will find out the fraction of a cord involved. The cord price is the "unit price" for fuel wood.

It's also required by law that every buyer receive a bill of sale with the price per cord or fraction of cord clearly stated and the total amount of the sale.

Conservation Camps Available For Youths

Some 1,200 New York State youngsters ranging in age from 11 to 14 years, will spend one week this summer learning about their environment, what makes it tick and how they can help improve it. They will be the latest recruits in a program that has reached more than 31,000 young people since 1947 as attendees at three environmental education camps operated by the Department of Environmental Conservation.

"Young people are idealistic and attendance at these outdoor-oriented camps teaches them how to channel this idealism into practical help for the environment," explained Commissioner Ogden Reid. "Campers, both boys and girls, are sponsored by organizations which select the youngsters on the basis of their interest in the environment. The program is designed to help young people gain a sense of stewardship for our environment," Commissioner Reid said.

The Department operates three camps: Lake Colby, serving northern New York, which has been co-educational for four years; DeBruce, serving southern New York and Long Island, which will be co-educational this year for the first time; Rushford, serving central and western New York.

Colby and DeBruce take boys and girls 11 to 13 years of age, while Rushford can accommodate only boys; at this time. The age limit at Rushford is 13 to 14 years. Sponsoring organizations pay $60 per camper for the one-week stay. Food and lodging, in rustic but comfortable surroundings, is provided. Transportation is each camper's responsibility.

Additional information and camp applications are available at the Department's regional office. Brochures describing the camp program are available from the Bureau of Education, Department of Environmental Conservation, 50 Wolf Road, Albany, N. Y. 12233.
