It was interesting to note that on a recent edition of PDC-TV's 'Meet The Press', a manner of meyors of large cities in this nation were interviewed concernig their problems and fiscal situations in relation to the need to receive federal aid. Although, the problems were himerous, some of hose mayors in places like Seattle, Washington and Omaha, Nebraska took pride that their cities could stand on their own and the fiscal deficits were either minor or non-existent. The mayor of New York City was missing from this group, and I imagine for good reason.

York City was missing from this group, and I imagine for good reason.

It is the obligation of the State Legislature to concern diself with the needs of all the residents of this State. In by cities, small cities, and rural areas. And I would not object so thech to what the State has done for these may be cities who understeadly need the help, if there had been any attempt to show some equity in doing the same kinds of things and spending the same kinds of things and spending the same kinds of dollars for our rural areas and smaller communities. This was not the case. Quite the opposite. Under the heavy hand of the Democrat leaders this controlling the Assembly all attempts by upstate Republicans to amend major spending shifts for these big four cities (Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, and Yohkers) and the many modey third for New York City, were thirated at every turn, and even unjuste Assembly Democrats, who campaigned on promises of being independent of the big vity Democrat political machines, were forced by their leaders the two vote for money bills benefiting these big cities and against even a meager amount of funds for our other areas of the State.

This abuse of big city political power was so bitatant, that in the ger mount of funds for our otherareas of the State.

This abuse of bla city political power was so bistant, that in the closing hours of the session, as pecial interest New York City bill which could have no affect in any other part of this State and which could only benefit New York City, was carried on the Assembly floor by Democrat Assemblyman Tom Brown of Albary who admitted that he was proful to be its main supporter. Yet, two days
