As a result of the big blow that struck the Florida area over the weekend, Andover got a good soaking rain and a cold North wind. Weather Officials state that while the weather we have experienced the past week is not a part of the hurricane, it is directly connected with it in as much as the storm in the southern states created a low pressure area which made way for a high pressure area in the North to move in, bringing with it the rain and cold North wind. Andover's rainfall for the past week totals 4.45 inches but no damage was reported in this area.
