Can Andover's Panthers keep their cool? This season in soccer, both the boys' and girls' teams have come this far undefeated, with considerable ease and substantial scores. The test will now be whether the A.C.S. teams have been versed well enough in sportsmanship so as not to get too pompous over their present success.

This attitude is a rare quality to be found in much of anything today, be it a soccer squad or a business firm. It says much for those who display it. There have been examples of this quality before in A.C.S. sports and it has left a good feeling with each person displaying such sportsmanship. For example when an Andover player has run into an opponent he has heaped the other player up with an apology and concern for the other's well-being. It's times like these that one not only appreciates the quality of the sports at A.C.S., but also the fine sportsmanship of the athletes.

I hope that, winning or losing, the teams and individuals coming from A.C.S. never lose that special quality of concern and sportsmanship towards the other team. Let's not become so concerned with the game that we forget its a sport and people who are playing. Let's not let ambition and emotions get in the way. Let's keep our cool.

New Teacher At ACS

by Lisa Marsh

Mr. William Joy has learned from his experiences that life, including education, can be made exciting and worthwhile if you are aware of the many things that are available on this earth. As an English teacher at ACS he would like to spread this good news to the students. I believe he has already begun to do this.

He was brought up in Batavia with six brothers and sisters. In the line of children he is second youngest, older than one brother. After high school, Mr. Joy went on to several institutions of higher learning including: a junior college in Boston, Southern Illinois University of Missouri in Kansas City and Geneseo. While at Geneseo he practiced teaching in a small town not much different from Andover. I asked him about his practice teaching, and whether it was useful to him. He explained that some of the most valuable lessons he learned were on planning for classes. Not only is it important for the teacher to be prepared, but also the students because not much gets accomplished if no one knows what he is studying about.

Most of his activities center around the school and planning lessons. When he does have free time, Mr. Joy gets quite involved with photography. He even develops his own film: besides this he likes to read. History is a great interest of his, especially the medieval period. In the sports field handball and running are high on his list.

One of the things that upset Mr. Joy when he was in school was having a composition that he had written handed back with no corrections or comments concerning the thoughts expressed.

English to Mr. Joy, is not only grammar but communication. His tenth grade classes are now studying English as a communication skill. This not only takes into consideration his students, but also the other people in the school.

In between colleges, William Joy went to Viet Nam with the Army in a medical unit. He explained it as "exciting but sad in a lot of ways." Some of the exciting things concerned the native people. Their customs, he informed me, are so different that it is hard to explain the feeling one gets from being away from one's homeland. Many soldiers became homesick, especially if they were married. (Mr. Joy is not), but one could make the most of it by getting involved with the people. Acquainting himself with individual Vietnamese families and working with the people in Saigon and the villages nearby were some of the ways Mr. Joy "made the most of it."

Mr. Joy wants to teach the good side of life that gives valuable knowledge. He likes the Andover School and its surroundings to teach in. Besides the environment the people have given him inspiration to pursue his teaching career.

Welcome to Andover Mr. Joy

Pantherettes

by Brenda Haugh

Last Monday night the Pantherettes were really on the prowl. The girls rolled over Wellsville 5 - 0.

On Wednesday, they continued their winning ways in Whitesville by winning 3 - 1 in the rain. They then continued on, stomping Scio 4 - 0 on the 26th. This gives the girls a 6 - 0 overall record and a 3 - 0 league record.

The next game is on Wednesday October 1 at Belmont, followed by a game Friday, October 3 with Richburg at home.

The game with A-A which was postponed, will be played October 4, Saturday, at 11:00 A. M., at home.

SOCCER

Last week in soccer action Andover faced Greenwood at their home field and won 2 - 0 with goals by Marty Geer and Rick Cahill. Dale Russell, in the goal, did a fine job with 13 saves.

Coming home to face a stubborn Whitesville squad, in constant rain and ankle deep mud Andover went on to a 3 - 0 victory. The player of the game was Gary Barden with three goals. The whole team worked together well.

This week Andover will face Richburg and Wellsville at home, then on Friday travel to Belmont to start the second half of the season.

CROSS COUNTRY

For the first time in a long time a Meet was held down in the town instead of the Joyce Hill course so on Tuesday a lot of people saw their first Cross Country Meet.

In the Meet Andover's top runner, John Davis, had a fine showing coming in holding fourth spot. The next runner for Andover was a real surprise — in 11th place was Brett Grossman. The next two places were 14 and 15 held by Russ Godown and Brian Weber. The number five man being 18th was Terry McCormick.

It was a fine job by everyone who helped out, and cheered the runners on.

The next Meet is Tuesday at Franklinville. Be sure to come to the next home Meet to see something different.

Cub News

by Karen Joyce

The Cub Basketball is an organization set up by Mr. Carmody. These teams are made up of seventh and eighth graders. Each team has a squad of cheerleaders. The teams play against each other, this is a good opportunity for the students to get to know each other.

Journalism Class Speaker

by Nancy Stephens

The High School Journalism Class at A.C.S. had a guest speaker on Wednesday, September 24. Jim Hopkins, a reporter from the Olean Times Herald and advisor for the Tor Echo at Alfred Tech, spoke to the class about feature stories.

Mr. Hopkins told us that a feature story can be written on anything that is interesting or useful to the public. The story can be written on new subjects or on nostalgia. With him we analyzed a feature article he had published. Mr. Hopkins was a very interesting guest and the class learned how one writes a feature article.

Senior Interview

Debbie Buckwalter

When asked to conduct and write up an interview with seven teen year old Andover senior Debbie Allen, I hesitated for a moment before agreeing. Debbie, being in the BOCES "half" of the class and I being fairly new in Andover and in the other half of the class, I didn't feel as though I knew her too well. Then she thought struck me, maybe this would be an ideal way to narrow the gap between us, and it did! I've found a very interesting and friendly personality, and would like to share a few of her feelings with you.

Debbie is the second oldest in a family of five children — which doesn't mean much to you unless you ask how she feels about a family of that size. I did and she answered very happily, "I like it. There's more going on than in a family of just one or two." Her family life may have been the decisive factor in teaching Debbie to face challenges, many of which she has come up against and been able to master, shown in her three successful years on the girls' basketball team and her achievement of a position in National Honor Society for two years.

Where will such factors lead her in the future? She has expressed interest in finding a job in the area of secretarial work, having taken office practice at the BOCES Center for one year, and working on the second year.

A few other areas of interest are: ceramics (which reveals her artistic side) and other sports besides basketball. She says she would have liked to go out for other sports but there just wasn't time. Debbie keeps busy at one thing or another most of the time.

We'd like to wish much luck to Debbie in whatever she does. Don't forget all of us at ACS when you are the private secretary to the owner of IBM Inc.

Class News

JUNIORS

The eleventh graders so far are planning on selling Stanley Products before Spring vacation. They also will be taking charge of the hat and coat racks at basketball games and selling left over light bulbs. They are having a dance approximately the third week of January.

SENIORS

The seniors have started right off raising money by selling magazines. The drive started September 19, on a Friday. They also have been selling snacks and refreshments at soccer games. They have scheduled a dance for October 10, on a Friday night. The Band will be Okra. They are thinking about having a chicken Barbecue later on in the year.

Editor Speaks To Journalism Class

by Debbie Buckwalter

Our Journalism Class here at Andover Central was entertained and instructed by Mr. Lew Fons, owner and editor of the Wellsville Patriot on Friday, September 26.

Mr. Fons spoke to the class on the do's and don'ts of newspaper structure. Having written, who knows how many stories himself, he had some very valuable information for us. When asked what topics are good for a news story, Mr. Fons replied, "Anything that is either new and different, timely, nostalgic, or a human interest story." Anything, written well and involving people makes news.

"News is something that has happened or is going to, that people want to know or should know."

He told us that pictures are very important for catching readers interest. One very important factor in newspaper structure is that the news be kept strictly separated from opinion. You can write a story using the same news as in a news story, and add some personal opinions, but put it in editorial or personal column form.

All in all, we learned quite a bit about formal structure of a newspaper. Catch the next issue to see if we put it to good use.

Dr. Karlis Leyasmeyer Speaks At ACS

by Karen Hall

Dr. Karlis Leyasmeyer came to Andover Central School to speak to grades 8 - 12 on September 24 and 25.

Dr. Leyasmeyer is a Latvian who lived in Russia under communist control. He is well educated, holding various degrees in Humanities and Social Science. Mr. Leyasmeyer was persecuted by the Communists and Nazis. He escaped his sentence of death after facing a firing squad. He was forced to labor by the Nazis before he was liberated by the Americans.

He and his family came to live in the United States in 1949. His presentation was on the Ideal and Reality of Communism; the Present Communist Strategy; and how he escaped the Firing Squad.

We were very fortunate to have a speaker like Dr. Leyasmeyer who would share his first hand experiences with us so that we might be enlightened on such an important subject.

From Bulletins To Babies

by Nancy Stephens

Here at A.C.S. we have many ways of communicating, one of which is the bulletin boards around the halls. These bulletin boards are used for two reasons, one is to inform the students and teachers, and the other is to make things more fun and interesting for the students.

Two of the most interesting of these boards are the two which are done by Mrs. Phyllis Burdick, the first grade teacher. She does these boards according to holidays, special weeks or anything she thinks the students will enjoy. The one board talks about friends and the other one has pictures of babies, with humorous sayings underneath them.

Another bulletin board, across from the main office, gives information to the students on activities and it gives the Senior High Honor Roll also. The High School Library also has a bulletin board, which is available to all and this is primarily used to announce various activities. Anyone, who has something of interest to the students can put it on this board for all to see. Last, but not least, is the bulletin board by the Home Ec. Room, which is used by the FHEA to put different messages across to the students about health jobs and other interesting subjects.

These bulletin boards are very creative and useful to the students and teachers, and we really appreciate those people who take the time to arrange them.
